What happened in Honduras was not a coup. It was the peaceful and legitimate action of a representative government protecting itself from a power grab by a would-be dictator.

And what happened in Iran was backlash from an oppressed people trying to free themselves from actual dictators.

I find it both interesting and scary that President Obama says he does not want to get involved in the internal affairs of Iran, yet adopts the opposite policy with Honduras. And in both cases, the dictator, not the people, enjoyed the benefit of his support.

Imagine if our own government were as protective of our constitution as Honduras is of theirs. Perhaps that is what Obama fears as he continues his own power grab here at home.
